You are invited to Think Outside the Box

Since 2007 individual artists, students, schools, community organizations of all ages and patrons have made neighborhood sidewalks and street corners a livelier experience for pedestrians thanks to their partnership with the City of Ventura Public Art Program.

"Think Outside the Box" is a streetscape showcase for talented local artists and community members to transform street light utility boxes and boxes that house traffic signal controllers into new public artworks.

The artists, selected by the Public Art Commission, reflect a diversity of painting styles and perspectives that bring vibrant color and vitality to Ventura's urban landscape by raising awareness of local and global issues, honoring our city's rich multi-cultural heritage or creating images of fun, inspiration and beauty.

"Ventura in Motion" by Judy K. Suzuki captures our city's passion for surfing, music and dance.

How the partnership works

Artists or artist teams of all ages and experience levels are encouraged to complete and return an application with a detailed color rendering of their planned utility box design.

Local patrons are invited to adopt a utility box for a suggested $700 donation that pays for artist honoraria, painting supplies, plaques and project administration.

The Public Art Commission reviews applications for approval and suitability: the designs may not contain advertising, religious art, sexual content, negative imagery or convey political partisanship.

Artists receive a voucher to purchase approved paint and a $500 honorarium for their creative work. A plaque identifying the artist and patron is placed near the utility box once the artwork is complete.

above: "Treasure Box" by Stefan Verstappen evokes "the box of hopes and dreams" that Ventura's Chinese settlers brought with them to the New World.
